What A Square In addition to the main house situated on a contemplative cove in Darien, architect Andrew Bartolotta designed a diminutive pool house that he and the project's interior designer, Amy Zolin, refer to as "The Cube." The Beinfeld Architecture-designed pool was installed by Signature Pools. See Resources.

AN ARCHITECT AND A DESIGNER TEAM UP TO DELIVER A ONE-OF-A-KIND HOME THAT FITS IN YET STILL STANDS OUT

BY DAVID MASELLO | PHOTOGRAPHY BY CHICHI UBIÑA

JUST AS NO TWO SEASHELLS, COVES OR pieces of beach glass found along the Connecticut shoreline are identical, so too is this house a wholly original find. Situated on a tidal inlet in Darien, this five-bedroom house by architect Andrew Bartolotta is like no other residence in or around town. Yet it harkens to both traditional New England vernacular forms and decidedly contemporary ones. “The house blurs the lines between the new and the traditional,” explains Bartolotta, a principal in the Norwalk firm of Beinfield Architecture. “The clients, a couple with two children, wanted a modern house, but one that still fit into the context of Darien.”

One of the defining features of the structure is its monochromaticism, with its walls, roof and trims of a similar brownish hue. “This was a deliberate aesthetic decision,” he says. As a result of the complementary shades, the very form of the house emerges fully, its geometry all the more pronounced.

Given the long list of siting constraints for residences built on and near Long Island Sound, the architect notes that the positioning of the house on the property dictated its resulting design. One conspicuous example of that is the way the windows wrap corners and form diagonals in order to embrace as much of the surrounding water and land views as possible. Another notable design moment is the glass bridge that delicately vaults an existing stream and links with a boardwalk to the front door.

While the clients were very engaged with both the architecture and the interior design, the resulting home, inside and out, was largely the result of a strong and collegial collaboration between Bartolotta and Amy Zolin, the interior designer, who is part of the team at Greenwich's Clarity Home Interiors. “The client relied on me for the resources and the materials, but she was also very hands on while Andrew and I began our work together during the construction phase,” notes Zolin. What both architect and interior designer knew from the start was that the clients wanted this house to feature their growing art collection, while remaining casual in feel.

Glass Act (ABOVE) The rear façade is punctuated with numerous picture windows to take in views of the cove and pool. Keeping Dry (LEFT) The cabana interior has a stainless steel fireplace from Design Within Reach; the Gloster chairs and sofa are upholstered in waterproof material. See Resources.

Subtle Separations The kitchen, dining area and living room (above) meld, though strategically placed furniture and colors help demarcate the individual spaces. The sectional is adorned with Nobilis throw pillows. The splayed-legged dining table (OPPOSITE PAGE), designed by Christian Woo, is composed of steel and American walnut and surrounded by De la Spada chairs. The bamboo and silk rug is custom through Woven Concepts. See Resources.

Upstairs, Downstairs (LEFT) The main staircase is the star element of the space. “Depending on the light in the room, the staircase takes on a bronze or black cast,” says Bartolotta. “While it appears to be floating on its own, there is a super structure holding it firmly in position.” A Bocci light fixture has a customized drop of 16 feet from the ceiling to the bottom of the fixture. See Resources.

Family Life The family room (OPPOSITE PAGE) provides more doses of color, particularly in the Holly Hunt purple velvet on the sectional and the lacquered Tod side table from DDC. Maya Romanoff wallcovering is made of woven natural grasses, and the custom rug is made of New Zealand wool. Suite Spot (THIS PAGE) The master suite has a soothing and muted palette. The Milo Baughman–designed reclining chair is through DDC; sconces are through Olympia Lighting. In the master bathroom, the vanity features Kohler sinks, Waterworks faucets, and a tarnished-silver Apparatus sconce. An MTI Boutique Collection Elise tub through Torroco is fitted with Waterworks hardware. See Resources.

“When I showed the client some of these colors, she said ‘yes’ to them all. Her personality came through and so did that of the house”

Which is not to say that the interiors are gallery-calm and restrained. A bright yellow mudroom, a family room punctuated by large-scale purple sofas, and a living room that pops with aqua-teal bookcases, periwinkle sofas and a multihued carper, whose pattern references an image of earth as seen from the moon, reveal a strong and calculated aesthetic. “When I showed the client some of these colors, she said ‘yes’ to them all,” says Zolin. “Her personality came through and so did that of the house.” Bartolotta added his own signature by tracing portions of the ceiling with slats of oiled walnut for what he calls “a corduroy treatment and a way to designate zones.”

The open-plan main area of the home combines kitchen, living room and dining area. While Zolin was careful to subtly demarcate each space, mostly through area rugs and wall treatments, Bartolotta was intent on uniting the space with a dramatic staircase that appears to float. “I thought of the staircase very much as origami,” says Bartolotta. “Steel, of course, doesn’t bend the way paper does, but I wanted the form of it to appear as effortless as a folded paper creation.” White oak treads are affixed to a steel frame, with risers daringly left open to the elements.

Meanwhile, Zolin complemented Bartolotta’s work by choosing a 16-foot chandelier that “cascades all the way down from the ceiling,” as she describes the effect. “The right chandeliers and lighting sources provide the theatrics in a house, without overpowering the other elements,” she stresses. “The whole house has that ‘ahhhh’ feeling to it when you walk inside.” 🌟
